A Summer Girl

(By Myrtle Reed.)

A load of hay in the street today—
I close my eyes, and the old dreams throng
Back to the time when the world was May,
And I hear the rush of the robins song:
My drifted years of grief and wrong,
And my heart, with its rue and asphodel,
Grow mute with love, in the old sweet way,
At the mystic touch of the summer spell.

A load of hay in the street today—
A hint of rain in the sun sweet air,
A closer scent in the flash of spray,
And the face of her who waited there,
With the clover bound in her sunny hair,
And the winnowed fields that the autumn brings,
Oh, life and love! How far away
From the soul that longs for the whisperings!

A load of hay in the street today—
And the tears fall fast in the dark tonight,
For the summer spell has gone astray,
Making sorrow and breathing blight;
Bringing winter instead of the night
Of blossoming May and the violet sod;
For I sit alone in the shadows gray,
And dream of her—in the fields of God.

DANCES.

The weekend dance at the Country club Saturday night was an unusually enjoyable affair, a large number of the members and their guests being in attendance. The club house, with its beautiful location, is an ideal place to spend the warm evenings and will no doubt be a popular rendezvous for society people during the summer.

Hereafter the enlisted men's dances at Fort Bliss will take place every Thursday evening from 8:30 to 12 o'clock. The dances are greatly enjoyed by all participating and a large attendance is expected next Thursday. Refreshments of lemonade, ice cream and cake are served. All enlisted men, their friends and families are always welcome.

A most unique affair was that given by the women of the First Baptist church Tuesday afternoon and evening.

It was in the nature of an exhibit of rare old bed quilts and counterpane. The walls of the large Sunday school assembly room, with its many class rooms, were completely hung with precious heirlooms of past generations. Many articles shown were more than 100 years old.

A delicious two course lunch was served to the guests during the afternoon and evening.

There were so many expressions of pleasure at the exhibit that those having it in charge decided to have a similar exhibition in the fall in connection with the holiday bazaar of the church.

It was the last of a series of dances given by the Fraternity and was perhaps the most enjoyable of the season. The punch room was also decorated with pennants and the fraternity colors of blue and gold.

turns the scale, one way or the other, as to whether or not the Glasses will help your eyes. Imperfectly adjusted glasses strain the nerves, because the focus is not right.

Perfectly adjusted glasses center the focus correctly and are the proper distance from the eyelashes.
